The Objective of this course is to introduce students to the English novel in general, and in connection with the special worlds and climates of the novel in particular, through the study of its technical elements including theme, events, and persons in addition to topics. The course should cover a minimum of 6 selected novels of the 19th and early 20th centuries. The treatment should embark on analytic and evaluative accounts of the selected novels.