The conference idea

Higher education in the third millennium witnessed series of changes as a result of its impact on political, economic, social, and technical globalization. Where it involved many aspects it brought him out of his local isolation to openness to the countries and peoples of the world. As well as, the manifestations of the effects of globalization on higher education are highlighted by the increasing academic and professional mobility in the various educational institutions .

Sensing the challenges and opportunities that the contemporary global environment imposes on higher education in the Arab world, the policy of developing higher education has tended towards giving an international and global dimension to its plans, as the future vision of Arab higher education stipulated in its development plan for university education that competes for leadership and contributes to building a knowledge economy and a knowledge society, it meets the requirements of economic and social development, and highlights the international and global dimension in the policies of achieving the future vision of education .
